Small Scale Renewable Energy: solutions on the horizon

The necessity to implement green power in office buildings, hotels and homes, especially in isolated, small population, high energy cost environments like our island, is becoming more and more evident. Thanks to worldwide efforts in developing such systems that are economically feasible, the near future looks greener than ever before. If... availability and legislation will create the right conditions for implementation.

BPM presents 'Small Scale Renewable Energy: solutions on the horizon'

This one and a half day seminar, organized on October 6 and 7, 2010 in the Curaçao World Trade Center, provides new insights into initiatives that arise in the private sector with regards to small scale renewable energy production. All professionals interested in the potential of green energy in their future projects will find inspiration, new information and interesting visions from a variety of speakers.

Seminar focus:

- At what size are small scale systems economically feasible
- When and under which conditions will the government allow for private green power generation

Keynote Speaker: Gerry Braun

Our keynote speaker, Gerry Braun, is a leading expert on Renewable Energy programs in the US. He serves as Team Leader for the California Energy Commission (CEC) and the Public Interest Energy Research (PIER). Mr. Braun has served as Director of Solarex and later as Director of Thin Film Marketing for BP Solar. Mr. Braun has a B.S. in Mechanical Engineering from the University of Michigan, as well as a Nuclear Engineering degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.
